THE CURRICULUM The English Department offers the Bachelor of Arts degree with the following options:

- General English
- Creative Writing
- Screen Studies
- Professional Writing

THE ENGLISH DEPARTMENT TAKES PARTICULAR PRIDE IN:

- The quality of its undergraduate teaching. Our faculty regularly garner major teaching awards. You can count on your English professors to take you to the leading edge of our discipline.
- The small size of its lecture and discussion courses. You will become well acquainted with your fellow majors in freewheeling writers’ workshops and in group projects and class discussions.
- The diversity of its course offerings. From the Great Books, History of Film, and Teaching English as a Second Language to Women’s Literature, Fantasy Fiction, and an array of Creative Writing courses.

COURSES

The English Department invites any student of any major to enroll in our courses. We are convinced that an education that includes the Humanities promotes individual growth as well as the common good. The English major requirement is 45 hours of upper- and lower-division course work, and the minor requires 18 hours of English, at least nine of which must be upper-division. The department also offers seminar courses through the Honors College.
