THE CURRICULUM
The Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures offers French, German and Spanish as major fields of study. Minors may be earned in French, German, ancient Greek, Japanese, Chinese, Latin, Russian and Spanish, or an Area Studies Program.

OUR WORLD IS EVER CHANGING AND GROWING SMALLER EVERY DAY. UNDERSTANDING AND APPRECIATING THE CULTURE AND LANGUAGE OF OTHERS BECOMES MORE CRITICAL EVERY YEAR. Studying a language provides one with the ability to interact more successfully with a wider range of people while gaining a competitive edge in the job market. Foreign language majors gain a better understanding of their native language and can expect to find opportunities in varied fields such as law, medicine, government and industry.

COURSES
In addition to the standard courses in languages the department offers literature-in-translation courses for general education, and courses in German for reading knowledge and Russian for reading knowledge. In all languages offered by the department, elementary courses are available for students with no previous experience. Students with previous foreign language experience may take placement exams to find the course best suited for their level of proficiency. A major in a foreign language is often supported by another language or work in other fields.
